

Since television stations use our public airways free of charge they are obliged to serve the public good. The decision by Sinclair Broadcasting to air a one-sided "documentary" is harmful to our democratic process.

CBS is being investigated (and rightly so) for apparent inaccuracies in their reporting. Where is the investigation of Sinclair? Why are they permitted to run this piece without the proper checking of the accuracy of the charges in the program? Why are they not required to show a pro-Kerry "documentary" such as "Going Upriver" immediately after.

I think the FCC needs to look at the impact these media conglomerates have on our democracy. Thank you
